ECCLESIASTICAL FOLLY.

The kind and character of the resolutions passed at the Presbyterian Synod at Guthrie last week anent the Billups bill indicates how easily the clergy is imposed upon and how utterly impractical the ministry is in matters of politics. A few politicians among the preachers of any denomination can generally lead the whole body into ridiculous situations and excesses.

That so staid and ultra-righteous a gathering as a Presbyterian Synod could be led blindfolded into the tacit endorsement of Governor Haskell, who is just now busily engaged in brushing his own skirts, is almost beyond belief. The editor of this paper is a democrat and a Presbyterian, which may or may not be a strange or unusual combination, but he is both from innate and inborn principle. But even at the great risk of falling from grace, we finally persevere in the belief that the said Billups bill is a delusion and a snare, and that the resolutions of the Synod bespeaks the folly of a great ecclesiastical body rushing into the breach to save an exceedingly smooth politician from an unfortunate situation.

Haskell, like Roosevelt, is riding, booted and spurred, over the people and demanding support and endorsement from every element from the ignorant and vicious to the groomed and frocked representatives of the kingdom that is not of this world.

When a man holding a fat job, the gift of Haskell, rises in his place and declares his allegiance to his benefactor a charitable church and a more charitable public may excuse the offense, but to go out and attempt to line up a whole denomination in such defense is shameful.

Has the Presbyterian body laid aside sword and fagot and martyrdom through glorious history only to take up the petty quarrels of petty partisan politics? Is this the fruit of centuries of struggle as its wreath of thorns or diadem of glory? Nay, let the church vindicate God's truth against error, and show the faith that is in her in some other way.

The Billups bill has given us what we never had in the darkest days of territorial misrule and of appointive government. It has given us the saloon without license or the protection of law. It has given us a wild beast, not chained and muzzled, but turned loose unfettered by law, to tear and devour us. We ask any fairminded man in any community in eastern Oklahoma if there is not more liquor dispensed illegally under the Billups bill than ever before in all the history of this country.

Young Nick Longworth has played the part of Old Nick in the presidential succession matter.

The proposition to sell the school land has been lost in the maze of the political dance.

The sheath gown season is over and was all too fleeting.

THE FAIR

APOLOGY FROM LITTLE TOMMY.

Epistle That May or May Not Have Soothed Wounded Feelings.

Dear Teacher: My mother says I hafta apologize for drowen your pickchure on the bored as if you was an olled made with curls and a long wisker on your china witch you could not help or me neethur.

It was a meen thing to doo and I am sorry I didd it but I could not help it becaws you stood there looken so nacherl with the curls and the wisker and all and Jenny Ames dared me to doo it at reneess.

I doo not blaim you for wippen me becaws it looked so much like you you had a purfekte rite to be mad. If I was you I would be mad too.

My mother says nobody is so sensitive about her looks as a lady teacher espeshully if she is a feeble olled but this was not to go in the letter.

If you onley understood what is inside of boys heads maken them be mischeffuss you would be sorry for them for it is not exackly there fault.

I know you feel worse about it than I do becaws my wippen does not hurt now but a pickchure goes on forever. Teechers have a hard enuf time goodness knows without bein shode how they look for a whoal school to laff at.

Sometime if you do not care I will drowe you on the bored looken swete and yung and put your name under so everybody will know who it is and so no more for the present from your troo friend and skoller, Tommy.

HAVE FIRM BELIEF IN FAIRIES.

Curious Superstitions That Are Still Prevalent in Ireland.

In Ireland there have been for many, many ages curious superstitions regarding fairies. In the old time these imagined little elfins were thought to be half human and half spirit nature, and had strange powers over mankind. The good folk of Erin used to propitiate the fairies in many ways, a few of them being as follows:

If a child spilled milk on the floor the mother would say: "That's for the fairies," thinking that some fairy had caused the accident. Thus the careless child went unprimanded. If one were throwing slops out of the window or door she must cry out to the fairies: "Take care of the water!" Otherwise some fairy passing might get drenched, and retaliate in some unpleasant manner. If a horseshoe was nailed over the door it would prevent the fairies from entering to do mischief to the inmates. If a small piece of iron were sewed into an infant's garment the fairies would never molest it by causing it to suffer colic pains. If a large vessel filled with pure drinking water were placed in the kitchen at night the fairies on entering would not touch the food there, but content themselves with drinking the water.

Making Shakespeare Ancient.

A well-known dramatic critic visiting Stratford on Shakespeare's birthday and hearing the clangor of the bells, which, from their tower in the old church where the poet lies buried, awoke the little town to its devotions, approached a wintry-headed street sweeper in front of Irving's inn and said: "Who is the fellow they're making this fuss about? I see you have Shakespeare hotels, Shakespeare gingerbread, and only the other day I saw a man driving to town some pigs called 'Shakespeare's best'—who is he—the fellow who lived in that tumble-down shanty yonder?" The "oldest inhabitant" megaphoned his ear and wheezing, replied: "I think he writ." "Oh, he writ, did he? What did he write—books, confessions of a deer stealer, magazine articles—what?" "I think he writ for the Bible."

Drummers in Endurance March.

Paris was recently the scene of an endurance march of a peculiar kind. Only drummers attached to the military stations at Paris were permitted to take part. The route selected was a "circle around Paris," a distance of 23 1/2 miles. The conditions were that along the whole route each participant must beat the drum continuously in "march time." Only one of those who entered, a drummer attached to the One Hundred and Fifty-sixth regiment of the line, covered the distance and filed the conditions. He drummed around Paris in six hours and five minutes.
